DAN THE POP MAN

The first question to Danann Breathnach is an obvious one. How in the world do those of us not lucky enough to hail from County Limerick pronounce his name? 'It's pronounced Donann Brannack,' he says, cheerfully. He is the soul of cheerfulness, even when I ask him to name, off the top of his head, his favourite and least-favourite promotional pop videos of all time. 'Oaghhhh,' he groans, cheerfully, although in truth it is not the wacky question that it might be if I were interviewing, say, Dr David Starkey. For Breathnach is presenting a new show on Play, Pop Will Shoot Itself, which focuses on history's most memorable pop videos.

'I like ones with narratives,' he says, after some thought. 'I used to love the Duran Duran videos. They were the first band to really put an effort in, to make it a short film, almost. But my favourite videos, specifically? Ermmm, I like Window Licker by Aphex Twin.'

Breathnach is 27 and hip, while I am a tad older, not so much hip as hip replacement. Bearing this in mind, it should surprise nobody that I have never heard of Aphex Twin. So he promises me that he will e-mail me a slightly more mainstream selection of his favourites and non-favourites, which, bless him, he duly does. They include videos by Madonna and Britney Spears (pronounced good), David Bowie, Mick Jagger and New Order (pronounced bad).

'I have always been fascinated by music, ever since my parents bought me a guitar when I was a kid,' he adds. 'My first album was Michael Jackson's Thriller, and the first poster on my wall was Adam and the Ants. Then I got into Guns n' Roses, who I thought were the baddest asses on the whole planet. There is one track where they say * off, and I couldn't believe what I'd heard. For the whole week I had friends coming in to hear the F-word on this record. It caused a sensation in Limerick.'

Breathnach used to enjoy jamming with his friends, but gave up the ambition to become a rock star at a relatively early age – around 25. 'Actually, I still would love to be a rock star,' he confides. So if he could metamorphose into someone, who would it be? 'The guy who's really got it sewn up is Bono. He's got the whole rock star thing down pat. He's so huge, but he's approachable. You see him around Dublin, pushing his supermarket trolley or whatever, which is incredible when you think that U2's concerts sell out in, like, seconds.' Incredible indeed.

On the run

How odd, yet paradoxically how typical, that Julia Roberts routinely stars in such soppy romances as this month's Runaway Bride, yet seems unable to find romantic fulfilment herself. And now the Hollywood establishment has fallen out of love with her, too.

Apparently they considered her speech at this year's Oscars 'disrespectful'. She presented the Best Actor award to her friend Denzel Washington, who co-starred with her in The Pelican Brief, and did not conceal her delight when he won. Movie bosses are said to have disapproved of her bias.

Roberts was further criticised for cracking a joke on stage that fell flat after she mixed up two names. She said she was glad that Tom Conti wasn't around this year, confusing the Scottish actor with Bill Conti, the orchestra leader to whom she referred in last year's Oscars as 'stick man' when he tried to cut off her Best Actress (for Erin Brockovich) acceptance speech. 'When she said "Tom Conti" everyone looked at each other like, "What did Tom Conti do to Julia?"' said a source, gleefully. 'Then everyone realised she meant Bill Conti and there was some embarrassed laughter.'

All rather petty. As, indeed, is Runaway Bride itself, a forlorn attempt to cash in on the success of Pretty Woman by reuniting Roberts with Richard Gere. For my money, though, which sadly is several tens of millions less than hers, Roberts is always worth watching. Runaway Bride, Sky Premier, Monday 3rd and Sunday 30th, see listings for times

Softly-spoken and self-deprecating, John Sullivan, on first acquaintance, is nothing like his most famous creation, Del Boy Trotter. But the more you talk to him, the more you recognise of Del: the wit, the heart of gold, the barrow boy background.

As a lad, Sullivan worked on a South London market stall, and later started reminiscing with Ray Butt, the producer of his first TV series, Citizen Smith. Like Sullivan, Butt had worked down Balham market. 'And we got chatting about it, about the fly-pitchers down there. Some of them weren't very good, and some were real comedians. And there was always a younger guy as a look-out. The chances were they were related, because who'd take on the job? It was always Rodney's complaint in Fools and Horses: "I'm 23 and a look-out."

From those conversations, Sullivan devised Readies, which became Only Fools and Horses, first transmitted on 8 September, 1981. 'There was a big silence afterwards,' Sullivan recalls. 'And then somebody – I don't know who, but I'd like to buy them the biggest gin and tonic – decided to repeat it in the summer. All of a sudden it was five in the ratings, and they asked me for another 14 episodes.'

Sullivan set about mining his past, turning a trivial incident in a pub into one of the funniest moments in situation comedy history – Del falling through the bar. 'I was waiting for someone in The George, on the top of Balham Hill, and this guy leaned forward to light his cigarette from his mate's lighter just as the barman came out. He stumbled, and then gave a big cheesy grin, and I thought "I'll use that one day." I told David and he said, "Let me just go wallop." I've often wondered whether the guy saw it, and thought, "I did something like that once."

That sequence is cherished by members of the 6000-strong Only Fools and Horses Appreciation Society, which is planning a mobile museum featuring such treasures as Del's original sheepskin coat. Sullivan has not yet been to one of their conventions, parking his Mercedes among all the Reliant Robins. 'But I will,' he says.

The programme is particularly popular, he adds, in the former Eastern Bloc countries, though it has yet to make it in America. 'They don't understand it. One producer watched it and said, "This might as well be in Danish." Another said, "We just don't have these people in America." What he meant was, "We don't have these people in Beverly Hills." The dipstick.

Little at LARGE

The integrity of his performance as put-upon teenager Antony in The Royle Family secured Ralf Little more than an army of female fans, but as Tina Ogle finds, his feet remain firmly on the ground

DRAMA

AS THE TACITURN AND terminally embarrassed Antony in The Royle Family, Ralf Little was a joy to behold. The essence of a tongue-tied teenager, we all felt for him as he endured his dad's jokes and mam's well meant but misplaced concern.

The 21-year-old was barely 17 when he joined the cast after what he describes as 'the weirdest but easiest audition I've ever done'. After a gentle chat with creators and writers Caroline Aherne, Craig Cash and Henry Normal, he went on his way thinking he'd blown it. 'But they'd phoned before I got home to tell me I'd got it. I couldn't believe it,' recalls Little, whose performances in the first three series of the hit comedy can be relived this month on UK Gold.

Little had lots of experience as a child actor, winning a role on BBC kids' series Sloggers when he was 13. He wasn't a precocious stage school child, though; drama being just one of many activities to which his parents dragged him. 'My mum always had this philosophy where we had to try everything. Monday night was gymnastics, Tuesday night was swimming then straight to football, Wednesday night was badminton. It was like a military operation and music and drama were part of it.'

When the woman who ran his drama group decided to start an the concept, Little decided to log on and answer a questionnaire designed to test how well you knew Ralf Little. He scored nine out of 10. 'There was a question about where was I from and I got it wrong. Apparently I'm from Bolton.'

His heart-throb status causes him much amusement and he claims it isn't true. 'It's just this group of girls that have decided it's me that they like and nobody else in the country girlfriend, actress and presenter Lisa Rogers, would be likely to agree.

Realising The Royle Family was his big break, he has nothing but admiration and respect for the series and its cast. He says the best thing about playing Antony was not his stellar fellow actors but the ability to conceal a hangover. 'If I ever came in really hungover, all I'd have to do is sit on the sofa and look miserable. I just had to keep one ear open for my lines in case I had to say something, which was generally just "ur" anyway.'

Since the Royles, Little has been seen in BBC2 sitcom Two Pints of Lager (and a Packet of Crisps), Manchester film 24 Hour Party People and on stage at London's Royal Court. He played the late Beatle George Harrison in Presence for which he won a nomination as most promising newcomer at the Olivier awards. 'I've only ever done one play and I was only in it for two weeks so I was really chuffed about that,' he admits. He can also be seen in the new BBC drama, Paradise Heights, alongside Neil Morrissey and Charles Dale.

With a desperately dry sense of humour, a large amount of talent and his feet firmly on the ground, Little will obviously go far. His honesty is admirable: 'I was asked recently how I chose roles. I started saying, "Well you have to look at what the script is like," and then I realised that I was talking rubbish. I wait till something's offered to me, then I say yes, cos quite frankly I just want to stay working. I'd love to pretend that I get a constant stream of scripts but that's bs.' cg

THE WORD THAT CROPS up most when talking to television presenter Tania Bryer is lucky. It's almost as if the woman who is about to front the new-look Celebrity Extra for LivingTV can hardly believe her good fortune.

She first came to attention back in 1993 when she became a weather girl for Sky TV, a job she just 'fell into'. One of three daughters of an American mother and South African father, she had never planned a career in front of the cameras. 'It's very peculiar. Normally, with something like TV, you've wanted to do it since you were a child. But not me.'

After being born and brought up in London, Bryer went to study international politics in Washington DC and assumed she'd end up doing something financial. But on holiday in Tokyo, she was spotted by a modelling agent. 'I was offered this contract I couldn't say no to, the money was so good. I travelled the world doing everything from catwalk to photographic to catalogue and TV.'

Eventually finding herself back in London, she took a job in the promotions department of Vogue. But this was short-lived, as she was soon asked to talk about cold fronts, and has made her living from television ever since. 'It was a bit of an accident and then I realised that, wow, TV is really what I want to do. I just suddenly found my niche.'

She moved over to Good Morning ... with Anne and Nick and graduated from weather to fashion, lifestyle and celebrity news, meeting big names such as Caprice (inset, with Bryer). 'It's amazing, I've just been incredibly lucky. I've met a lot of interesting people. Everybody I've looked up to in the entertainment business really. They say you should never meet your heroes, but Bryer disagrees. 'I've never really been let down. People like Sandra Bullock and Tom Cruise are just so nice. They're open and friendly and warm. You admire them and their talent and their success and then you meet them and it's wonderful.'

Bryer says the toughest part of her work is the insecurity, but again she seems to have escaped the worst: 'I've always been lucky and had long contracts. And now, if I've had a bad day, I've my family to go home to.' They are her husband, the president of a sports management company, and two young daughters, Natasha and Francesca. 'I'm still ambitious and would love to host a Saturday-night show on ITV but having children does change your values.' cg

X-TERMINATED

Gillian Anderson contemplates life after starring in one of TV's biggest shows.
Lawrie Masterson is there to listen

AFTER NINE SEASONS AND 201 episodes, 'Case Closed' will be stamped finally on the ground-breaking sci-fi series The X-Files. The show, which has outlasted six entertainment presidents at its producing studio Fox, will be 'out there' no longer and that air of finality will be tinged with a mixture of sadness and relief for original star Gillian Anderson, who plays Special Agent Dana Scully.

Anderson, 33, had already vowed not to return after the ninth season, which starts this month on Sky One, as she tried to quit the show before the eighth, but eventually continued after a contractual struggle with the powers-that-be (Fox). But, despite that, she acknowledges that The X-Files took her to star status almost overnight and 'will continue to live as a huge part of my life ... and I will honour that'.

Teamed with David Duchovny as Special Agent Fox Mulder for the first seven seasons of the show (Duchovny reduced his workload in the eighth before leaving, but will be returning for the show's finale), Anderson says that while she did want to opt out in recent years, she has always felt comfortable returning. 'When it comes to that time of the year I have always started feeling like, "OK, it's time to go back to school. It's time to go back to Scully."

'I don't know whether another project around that same time will satisfy that urge,' she says. 'I think there will be an initial relief and celebration but, at the same time, a huge amount of sadness and a definite mourning period will need to take place. Whether it's immediately, months from now, or in five years, it will just hit me. I imagine it will be very strange.'

Like Duchovny, Anderson has written and directed episodes of The X-Files, which could be one pointer to her future. Another obvious direction is movies. In recent years she has starred in the contemporary drama Playing by Heart opposite Sean Connery, and as Lily Bart in The House of Mirth, an adaptation of Edith Wharton's turn-of-the-century novel.

'I think there will be an initial relief and celebration but, at the same time, a huge amount of sadness and a definite mourning period will need to take place'

'I want to do everything ... everything but Scully and Lily Bart,' Anderson says. 'There's a bunch of other things that I'd rather do before I do a period piece again, but at some point I will. And I am very interested in directing. But what I'm most looking forward to is having more options, being able to look at projects and actually know that I might be considered for them because I have the time.'

'In terms of this season, the writers have been working very hard and very successfully to write a show that takes into account the new characters, and at the same time, uses me to the best of my ability. They also have had to take into consideration that I am attempting to spend more time with my daughter. It's a huge balancing act for them.'

The ninth, and now final, season of The X-Files focuses on three leading characters - Scully, Special Agent John Doggett (Robert Patrick) and Special Agent Monica Reyes (Annabeth Gish). And, of course, there is the matter of Scully's mystery son, William. He was born at the end of the last series, but his father's identity was never revealed. And the alien interest in the little guy suggests he might not be human.

Why did Special Agent Alex Krycek want him dead? Perhaps Mulder's final X-Files appearance will provide the answers. But on that hotly debated subject Anderson is, of course, staying mum.

The moment of truth

The show may nearly be over, but The X-Files creator Chris Carter is resolutely upbeat and preparing for a memorable finale, writes Lawrie Masterson

Original star David Duchovny will be returning to the role of Agent Fox 'Spooky' Mulder for the two-hour finale of the ninth season of The X-Files - and Chris Carter, for one, is delighted.

The X-Files, with its catchphrase of 'the truth is out there', started out as a cult hit and became Fox TV's highest-rated series at its mid-Nineties peak. But ratings started to dip during the last season after Duchovny's departure.

Now Carter, the creative force behind the show, wants to celebrate the final series and is enthusiastic about the excitement in store for fans.

'The episodes coming up are terrific,' he says. 'We have tremendous effects, scares, chills and thrills. I think we have lost nothing in terms of what the show has to deliver each week, which is good, scary, dramatic, suspenseful fare.'

'I love to keep people guessing and off-balance and the trick is always to do something new and different. We have created hours of incredible images and I'm proud of that. There has been some duplication of subject matter, but we've always managed to come at it from a fresh visual perspective.'

While it will be goodbye to the series, there is still a possibility that another movie of The X-Files will be produced, following the 1998 big-screen debut which grossed $99m worldwide. Both Duchovny and Anderson have indicated interest in making another film.

'I have to say that the film script is in negotiations so we're really pushing forward on that,' Carter confirms.

Talking the talk

It's said that behind every man there's a great woman and, in the case of talk show titan David Letterman, she's booker Jo Jordan. Brian Viner grabs some coveted show tickets and meets the woman with the best contact book in America

By the book: Jo Jordan secures the likes of Sean Connery, right, for the show

NOW SHOWING

Late Show with David Letterman

ITV2, weekdays, 7.00pm, 11.00pm

A PAIR OF TICKETS for Late Show with David Letterman, the nightly talk show on the CBS network that has become an American institution no less revered than the Statue of Liberty, were recently auctioned for $1300 (around £800).

That might not seem like an especially huge sum, but consider this: tickets to sit in the Late Show audience are free. You can apply for them in writing or over the internet, or you can turn up in person at the venerable Ed Sullivan Theater in midtown Manhattan.

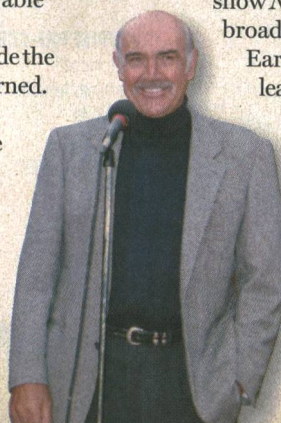

Every weekday afternoon, a crowd gathers outside the theatre in the hope that some tickets might be returned. This is the stand-by audience. From time to time, Letterman likes to pull stunts with them. He once had them sent to Miami for a week's holiday at CBS's expense. Another time he had them all kitted out at Gap in matching outfits.

But for the hopefuls waiting outside, there is mostly no stunt, and more often than not, no tickets. So when ITV2, which airs the show in the UK, offered me a ticket for a recent taping, I did not hesitate. I know how sought-after they are. The couple next to me in the auditorium had travelled nearly as far as me, from Salt Lake City in Utah. They were beside themselves with excitement.

The taping started at 5.30pm, for transmission that night in the sacrosanct 11.35pm slot. On NBC at the same time each night is The Tonight Show, hosted by Letterman's deadly rival, Jay Leno. And on ABC is the current affairs show Nightline, presented by American broadcasting legend Ted Koppel.

Earlier this year, Koppel was furious on learning that ABC executives planned to ditch his show and offer the slot to Letterman. To lure him to their network, they offered Letterman $31m a year. In the event he stayed put, but not before CBS matched the exorbitant offer. The gap-toothed 55-year-old from Indianapolis is an enormously rich and, in television terms, immensely powerful man.

WIN!

When he bounded onto the stage just before 5.30pm, though, he was in the guise he enjoys most. Off stage he seems introspective and neurotically private; on stage he is extrovert and warm. He is also a brilliant improviser.

In the show I saw, he interviewed Will & Grace actress Debra Messing, plugging her appearance in the Woody Allen film Hollywood Ending. At first she was palpably nervous. The interview seemed destined to flop. But by the sheer force of his wit, Letterman pulled it round, not only making himself look good, but making her look good, too.

Messing had been booked for that night's show by Jo Jordan, who runs Central Talent Booking, and has been securing guests for Letterman for over seven years. The most interesting thing about Jordan is not that she's still only 35, but that she is English.

Before the show, I visited her in her office in Little Italy. She is bubbly and enormously engaging, her accent a curious hybrid of New York and Home Counties. In 1995, Jordan, a former secretary, was booking guests for Clive Anderson and Ruby Wax. When Late Show came to London for a week, the then-executive producer Robert Morton ordered his underlings to find the best talent-booker available. They found Jordan. She has been with the show ever since.

I told her that my only insight into a talent-booker's life came from Janeane Garofalo's Paula in The Larry Sanders Show. 'Oh, I could never watch it,' she says, merrily. 'It was too close to home.'

She was excited that day because she had just booked Jodie Foster, who has never done Letterman before, and also Liza Minnelli. On an average day, in pursuit of guests for weeks and months ahead, she makes at least 60 phone calls and receives 300 e-mails. And sometimes she is saddled with an embarrassment of riches.

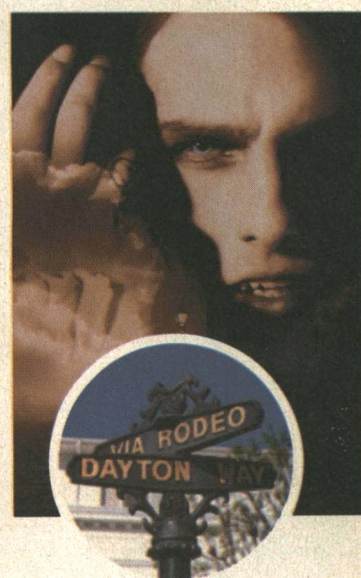

'There was one day recently when I was offered four major A-list stars - Sean Connery, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Kevin Costner and Tom Hanks. We could only take one so we had Sean. Hanks could do another day, and the other two we had to turn down.'

When booking guests, Jordan must bear in mind Letterman's likes and dislikes. There are people he will not have on his show (which for a long time included Cher), and people whose company he greatly enjoys, including Julia Roberts and Bill Cosby.

'When Cosby comes on,' says Jordan, 'we know that there is this restaurant he likes round the corner, which serves beans and rice. So we always make sure we have his favourite beans and rice in the dressing-room.'

Now that is pure Larry Sanders. No wonder she couldn't watch. cg

One day I was offered Sean Connery, Catherine Zeta-Jones, Kevin Costner and Tom Hanks. We could only take one so we had Sean. Hanks could do another day, and the other two we had to turn down Jo Jordan

LUCKY BREAK

Given the chance to play a role written for him and to co-star again with his old pal Bruce Willis, there was no way Samuel L Jackson was going to turn down Unbreakable. Interview: Lawrie Masterson

EVEN BEFORE M Night Shyamalan had finished editing his hit paranormal thriller The Sixth Sense, the precociously talented young writer and director had started hatching an idea for his next movie, the intriguing Unbreakable. He even knew exactly who he wanted for the lead roles.

The 31-year-old Indian-born, American-raised film-maker (real name Manoj Nelliyattu Shyamalan) is the son of doctors and, appropriately enough, had found the key to his new film in a real but rare disease called Osteogenesis Imperfecta, a genetic disorder characterised by bones that break easily, often from little or no apparent cause.

Shyamalan created Elijah Price, a comic book-obsessive who suffers from the aforementioned condition and believes that for every unfortunate person there is an opposite twin – someone who is unbreakable. When David Dunn walks away unscathed, the sole survivor of a horrific train crash, Price believes he has found his man. It is when the two meet that things become really unsettling.

Having already shot The Sixth Sense with Bruce Willis, Shyamalan had no trouble convincing the Hollywood A-list actor to work with him a second time and play the role of Dunn. For Price, his 'Mr Glass', Shyamalan's first and only choice was Samuel L Jackson, star of such movies as A Time to Kill, Jackie Brown, the Star Wars prequels The Phantom Menace and Attack of the Clones, and, alongside Willis, Pulp Fiction and Die Hard: with a Vengeance.

'I was overjoyed that Night had written something like this for me specifically and that he had the confidence in me that I could make this guy come to life. I read it and it was pretty much the way you see it on screen. I was ready to start shooting it the next day, so it was kind of like the same way I did Pulp Fiction. I read it, I read it again to make sure I was reading it right, then it was like, "OK, this is fabulous. Let's shoot it."

'Hopefully, the majority of characters that I play are that interesting and that complex and do present challenges for me, the actor, to overcome. I like to see if I can meet those challenges and I'm really proud of this particular piece of work.'

Number one at the US box-office again recently with the action thriller Changing Lanes, co-starring Ben Affleck, the lanky, 53-year-old Jackson is one of Hollywood's busiest actors. After an interruption to his career in the mid-1980s, when he admits to 'full-blown addiction' to cocaine, he now sometimes stars in as many as five movies a year.

'All I can say is that I have the kind of personality that doesn't allow me to do anything kind of half way,' he says of his troubled times.

Jackson had his first conversation with Shyamalan about Unbreakable six months before the script was completed, after having bumped into his old pal Willis in a casino.

'Bruce had just finished The Sixth Sense and I told him I had read that script and that it was awesome,' Jackson says. 'He started talking about Night and how that experience was and then he said, "Well, he's actually writing a script for us to do" and he called him on the phone right there. Night said, "This is great – I was just writing one of your speeches."

Working again with Willis was just an added bonus for Jackson: 'We know each other so well,' he says. 'There's a level of trust there and I know Bruce is going to know his lines, he's going to do everything possible to make his character come to life – so I don't have to push him in any kind of way or pull something out of him to make a scene work or have him make my character effective.

'We just let go and do whatever we need to do.'

Letters

Do you have a comment or a question about what you're watching on cable TV? This is the forum where you can share your views (and there's the small incentive of a £50 prize for our favourite monthly letter), so get writing!

Write to: The Editor, Cable Guide, 40 Bernard Street, London WC1N 1LE. E-mail: viewers@cable-guide.co.uk

GENE THEORY

Can you please solve something for me? Is the actress Maura Tierney any relation to Gene Tierney, the actress who starred in 1940s films? Each week my mother (who's 79, by the way) and I watch ER, and every week she asks me the same question, and as I haven't a clue I thought I would ask you. Please help!
Jane Foxall, e-mail

Pleased to be of service, Jane. In fact, contrary to popular belief, Maura Tierney (who plays nurse Abby Lockheart in ER) is not related to actress Gene Tierney, who died in 1991 aged 70. Gene is probably best remembered for her role as the murder victim in the 1944 film Laura, but it was her role in Leave Her to Heaven (1945) for which she was Oscar nominated.

HANG TIME ATTRACTION

I watch Trouble every day and I really like Chad Gabriel - Danny Mellon in Hang Time. Do you have a fanmail address or any information about him that you could give me, or photos? Thanks.

Lori, e-mail

Chad was born on 7 March 1975, in Wisconsin, USA, Lori. Hang Time ended with its sixth season in 2001 and Chad only appears in seasons one, two and three (he's pictured, right, in the red, checked shirt). Unfortunately, we've had no luck finding a contact address for him, however, if you want to check out more NBC show information, log on to www.nbc.com and look at the section called TNBC.

REPEAT PERFORMANCE, PLEASE!

Could you please tell me how often you repeat the 9.00pm movies on LivingTV? I watched a film two weeks ago called Thrill Seekers and wished I had taped it. I've tried video shops and can't seem to find it anywhere. Are you planning on repeating it in the near future?
Berni, e-mail

Set your video, Berni! LivingTV tells us that Thrill Seekers will be shown again on Tuesday 18 June.

SMART ALEC

I'm a big fan of Cable Guide and can't wait to receive a new issue each month. I especially enjoy the Letters page. I love pretty much everything on Sky One, from Buffy and Alias to Roswell and Scrubs. I also love Dark Angel, but I can't find any information on it! My favourite character is Alec, but I don't know a single thing about the actor who plays him, his DOB or previous acting credits. Please put me out of my misery.

C L Iovannelli, Bristol

Alec is played by 24-year-old Jensen Ackles (DOB 1 March 1978). Born in Dallas, he was a child model and went on to star in Days of our Lives for three years until 2000. You can write to him at the Jensen Ackles Fan Club, PO Box 850812, Richardson TX 75085-0812, USA. And don't miss the season finale of Dark Angel on Sky One this month.

PERFECT BILLING

I have read many letters from people complaining about Buffy and Angel being shown on Thursday nights instead of Fridays, and would just like to say that I think Sky One has made a brilliant decision. I thought it rather unfair showing Buffy and Angel on Friday nights because, for lots of people, this is the night they go out with their friends. Having Buffy and Angel on Thursdays is great. Now we can watch our favourite programmes and go out. I also realise that Friends and ER are on at the same time on Thursdays - I just get a friend to tape them for me, it works out fine.

Louise, e-mail

MISSING SPEEDWAY

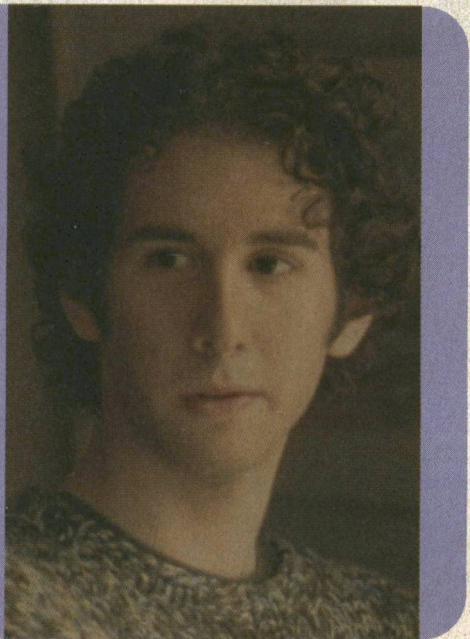

What happened to the Ice Speedway coverage? My husband watched the broadcasts last year and congratulated British Eurosport for giving us the chance to see a very exciting sport. As soon as the new year dawned, we wondered if they would do us proud again. Imagine our delight when reading the April issue of the Guide to find we were to be graced with the chance to see it again. We sat down, eagerly awaiting the start of the programme, only to be disappointed with boxing. I know the Guide is printed weeks in advance, but please could the

LETTER OF THE MONTH

Singing praise for Ally star

I watched the new Ally McBeal on 26 March [on E4], and I was really impressed with the wonderful singing voice of a young man who appeared on the show as Tom Berenger's son. He has appeared on the show once before, in the last series, and I would like to know his name and ask if you have any more information about him.
J Kinsey, e-mail

Josh Groban is his name, he was born in LA, is now 20 years old, and is an accomplished singer. He performed the song You're Still You in his first appearance on Ally McBeal, and To Where You Are in the recent episode with Tom Berenger. Josh duetted with Charlotte Church at the closing ceremony of this year's Winter Olympics, singing The Prayer. His album, Josh Groban, is currently on sale and his homepage is at www.joshgroban.com. Congratulations are in order, J Kinsey, for writing our favourite letter this month - you've won £50!

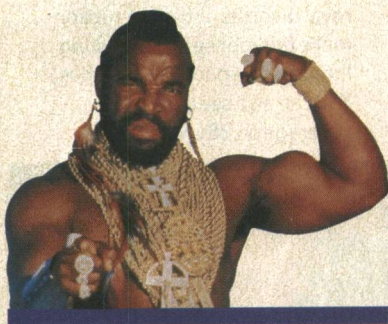

programme-makers stick to what they have said will go out, as it's very disappointing to fans of this sport. Please could you tell us if they will get around to showing the programmes that were forecast and make at least two people happy?

Mrs K Preston, Peterborough

Sorry, Mrs Preston, British Eurosport informs us that the channel won't be showing Ice Speedway this season, as the traditional tour has not been organised this year. The April issue of the Guide went to press before the tour was cancelled.

TOP MARKS TO THE A-TEAM

I would like to congratulate UK Gold on showing The A-Team. It is a truly great show. It has everything that every teen wants to see – explosions, sexy women, and not forgetting the fantastic Mr T [pictured]. I'm wondering if UK Gold plans on showing The A-Team in double episodes.

Andy, e-mail

A UK Gold spokesperson replies: 'It's great to know you have been enjoying the show. Double episodes each day are unlikely, but when The A-Team returns later in the year it will be on seven days a week.'

KEEPING IT IN THE FAMILY

I absolutely love Family Guy. It is one of the greatest comedies ever. I am wondering, though, if Sky One has any plans to show a new series or show repeats. Please tell me if Family Guy will return soon.

Stephen Fletcher, Manchester

Good news, Stephen! Sky One will be showing a new series of Family Guy from July as part of the new animation hour on Sunday afternoons, which will also include King of the Hill.

CHANNEL HOPPING MAD!

I have noticed that most articles printed on Letters are about programmes on Sky One, E4, etc. The smaller channels simply don't get mentioned. It's time for the lesser known channels to get known. I think I speak for everyone when I say, you can't beat Trouble in the afternoon for entertainment and laughs. Especially with comedies such as One on One and the new series of That 70s Show.
Andy Taggart, e-mail

We always try to include letters on a variety of topics and shows, Andy, however, Sky One and E4 tend to create the majority of feedback. We welcome your views on any programme or channel, so keep the letters coming.

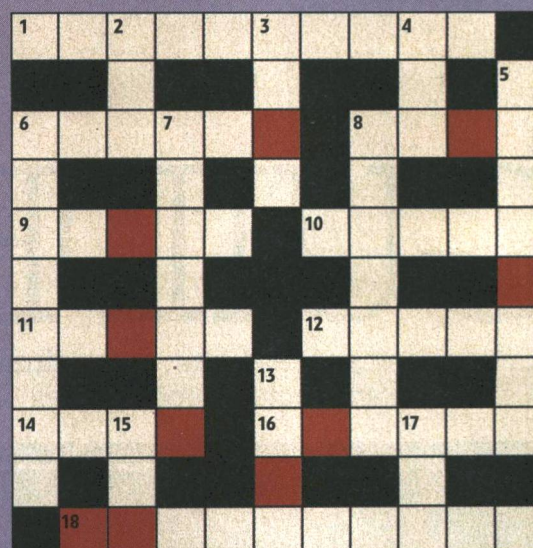

HOW ABOUT A NEW ROUTE?

Ever since I started watching the Travel Channel programmes, one of my special pleasures has been watching Railway Journeys. But, I now know them all! In fact, I nearly know them all off by heart, so after all these years is there any chance of brand new Railway Journeys? I know all about the expense, but what about a couple of new ones – for good attendance!
N Bradley, Sheffield

Travel Channel's head of programming, Angela Taylor, replies: 'We're so glad to hear that you enjoy Railway Journeys. These rank among some of the most popular programmes on Travel Channel. The many fascinating series of Railway Journeys will continue to be shown on Travel Channel – just in case you have missed any, these include Steam's Indian Summer, European Rail Journeys, Swiss Railway Journeys, Ireland by Rail, Africa's Champagne Trains, Scotland by Rail and Railway Adventures across Australia (see listings for details). The great news is that in summer 2003, we'll be bringing you six new Railway Journeys, which we are sure you will enjoy as much as the ones you already know so well.'

Letters may be edited for length. We can only reply to readers' letters published on this page. Please address specific queries or complaints to the relevant channel or cable operator.

The Nixon Tapes
Discovery
Monday 17, 8.30pm

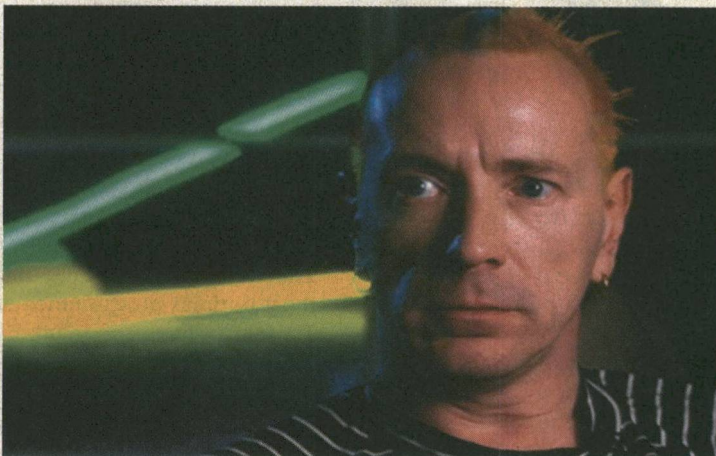

'I screwed up terribly on what was a little thing, but became a big thing.' So says former US President Richard Nixon in this unseen footage of interviews filmed with David Frost (above with Nixon) in 1977. Showing 30 years to the day after the Watergate 'burglars' were arrested, it offers a worrying insight into a man whose fear of political enemies drove him to create his own intelligence-gathering group to plug leaks of secret presidential activities and, ultimately, brought him down. His main 'mistakes', he says, were 'errors of the heart', the phrase he uses to describe his defence of top aides John Ehrlichman and HR 'Bob' Haldemann. It's a rare glimpse of the unfolding of the Watergate scandal from inside, with talk of tears in the Oval Office. As for Nixon, he 'regrets' events, but 'if they want me to grovel on the floor ... then, no, never'

JUBILEE: LOVE IT...

The Golden Jubilee
Sky News, from Saturday 1st

Short of fleeing the country, or spending the June holiday in an anti-Royalist household stocked with vast amounts of alcohol and food (for that, see below), chances are you will have a Golden Jubilee 'moment'. If this doesn't bother you, best follow the main events on Sky News, including a classical concert from the gardens of Buckingham Palace (Saturday 1st); the pop bash, featuring Paul McCartney, Annie Lennox and Elton John (Monday 3rd); a National Service of Thanksgiving at St Paul's Cathedral (Tuesday 4th); and a sovereigns' dinner at Windsor Castle (Monday 17th). Those street parties will figure also, but the likelihood there'll be as many people out there as for the Silver Jubilee is remote (though interest did rise after the Queen Mother's death). As Sky News's royal correspondent James Forlong (above) says, 'The deaths of Princess Margaret and the Queen Mother, royal divorces and other ructions make this jubilee an interesting litmus test in people's attitudes.' You can also see live Jubilee coverage on BBC News 24.

... OR HATE IT

Never Mind
the Jubilee:
The Punk
Years

Play, Monday 3rd and Tuesday 4th, from 9pm

A welcome antidote to all the official stuff that'll be on the telly – and your street if you're really unlucky. Never Mind the Jubilee: The Punk Years, a 10-part premiere, celebrates the 25th anniversary of the release of The Sex Pistols' God Save the Queen. Well, that and the glorious history of punk, from its birth in New York, with Velvet Underground and the New York Dolls to its influence on modern acts, such as Limp Bizkit, The Hives and The Strokes (pretenders, the lot) and the wider arenas of fashion, art, politics and coloured vinyl. In between, the NY movement had no little effect on Mr McLaren ... the rest, as the say, is a record banned by Radio 1, notoriety, media panic, chart success and a lead for other, more musical, bands to follow. And The Jam, The Clash, the Buzzcocks et al feature here. Contributors include Pistols' John Lydon (above) and Sham 69's Jimmy Pursey.

FACTUAL

Tough Guys
Weekend
UK Horizons
Saturday 22nd
and Sunday 23rd, from 6pm

A chance to take a closer look at this 'popular but often misunderstood sport' reads the blurb trailing this premiere. And so it is. From Born to Fight, in which Nell McAndrew asks boxing's professionals and amateurs what makes them want to fight, to Wrestling with Death, a study of the effects of televised boxing on children. Insightful, but you may remain in the 'misunderstood' camp nonetheless.

DRAMA

Sky One
Thursdays,
8pm, from 6th

The alien triumvirate return for a third series with the promise of more suspenseful drama. That's as may be, but a huge hook for this run is also the alien crossover in episode Secrets and Lies (Thurs 27th, 8pm), where Roswell meets Enterprise as Max (Jason Behr, above) auditions for a part in the latter. (Enterprise's John Billingsley guest stars.) Good Behr's getting back into the swing of auditioning, though, as a fourth Roswell's looking doubtful.

COMEDY

Spin City
Paramount
Thursday 20th,
9pm

The Sheen is high on the new, sixth, series of this sharper-than-average sitcom, as Martin S takes time out from The West Wing to play Dad to Deputy Mayor of New York Charlie Crawford (CharlieS). Before that, there's also a guest spot for Michael J Fox when Mike Flaherty arrives at Caitlin's (Heather Locklear, above with Sheen) with life-changing news. Fans of Fox will be rightly pleased, but few would doubt the quality of his replacement.

Heroes
Discovery
Wednesday 5th, 8.30pm

Hugely timely documentary, this, with Tobey Maguire wowing audiences as Spiderman and the comic-book inspired Unbreakable on Sky Premier (see page 12). A hugely influential art, the comic book has given life to the likes of Dan Dare, Dennis the Menace and Judge Dredd and this pays tribute to both the creations and their creators, with contributions from the likes of Marvel Comics' Stan Lee.

Movie
Awards 2002
MTV, Sat 15th

The movies we all watched and loved – or so MTV would like us to believe anyway – slug it out for the gongs that matter: Best Villain, Best Fight and Best Kiss to name but a few. Talking of snog action, MTV has secured former Best Kisser Sarah Michelle Gellar to co-host these populist shenanigans with class actor Jack Black. Meantime, back with the common-or-garden stuff, our bet's on The Lord of the Rings (above) to win Best Film ... well, that or Shrek.

KIDS

Daddio
Disney Channel
Sundays,
6.30pm,
from 16th

Michael Chiklis is Daddio, the brave/ambitious soul who trades roles with his wife to be the carer to their four kids in this new sitcom. His doubters abound, but Daddio (aka Chris) copes in his own masculine style. As Chiklis says, 'He's a young codger; charming and lovable, as well as cranky and acerbic. He gets into trouble because he's a good guy and out of it because he's a good guy.' Very American, then.

TO THE POINT

MAKING THE VIDEO:
EMINEM 'WITHOUT ME',
MTV, Mon 3rd, 9.30pm
The chainsawmeister's back after a fairly quiet 12 months by his standards – pistol-whipping apart. And here's the chance to see the UK premiere of the making of the video for his latest single. As regular MTV viewers will know, Slim Shady donned Osama Bin Laden attire for the vid; boy, is he just too surprising for us.

TOP 20 FOOTBALL
ANTHEMS, MTV,
Mon 3rd, 1pm

It was inevitable no angle would go uncovered in this World Cup year. So let two hours' worth of jingoistic lyrics and lame melodies begin. MTV has promised that New Order's World in Motion figures, but sad to say it's unlikely to drown out smug, vocally challenged duo Baddiel and Skinner.

SCRUBS, Sky One,
Thurs 13th, 8pm
A long list of Sky One faves take their leave this month – Enterprise, Angel, Alias and Dark Angel to name a few – but this comedy newcomer may well be the most missed. There's a guest spot from The Mummy's Brendan Fraser before Scrubs bows out, but that won't disguise the need to sharpen up the scripts again for the next series.

BABY BLUES, Cartoon Network, from
Fri 7th, 6.30pm
Parenting made funny, and rightly so, is the mainstay of this new baby from CN. Written by friends and first-time fathers Rick Kirkham and Jerry Scott, the voice talent includes Joel Murray and Drew Carey. Shows promise on the kiddie front.

SIXTH SENSE WITH
weekdays, 1.30pm and 6.30pm, from Mon 10th
The medium of TV blends with the medium that is Colin Fry in this new paranormal zone. Fry will 'connect' with a studio audience and give them a chance to speak on air to late loved ones. Tasteful.

World in ACTION

The toughest football tournament on Earth is here, and Luke Nicoli celebrates the supreme spectacle that is the World Cup. Plus, below, he hears seven personal perspectives for the 2002 event

THE PREPARATIONS ARE COMPLETE and global expectations have reached fever pitch. Yes, the World Cup finals are almost upon us.

All 32 teams have played out their dreams of lifting the treasured prize in Japan's Yokohama Stadium on 30 June, yet only a fool would bet against the usual suspects.

Argentina are favourites to emerge as champions for the first time in 16 years, with France, Italy and Brazil hot on their tails. Spain, Portugal and England have also been thrown into the equation; yet so thin is the dividing line that one touch of brilliance could define success over failure.

So who is likely to inspire their country to ultimate glory? Of all the runners and riders, our very own David Beckham is hotly tipped, foot injury permitting, to improve greatly on a bitter-sweet induction four years ago.

A trademark free-kick against Colombia booked a place in the second round, yet a petulant flick on the calf of Argentina's Diego Simeone signalled

THE GOAL GETTER

Michael Owen England

'There's no denying the World Cup made my name four years ago, but it still hurts when I think about the way we lost against Argentina.

Obviously, we have a chance to make amends this year, but it's so important that we get off to a good start against Sweden, considering the strength of our group. I feel we have a stronger squad this time, with a group of young players who now have tremendous experience. Would I like to continue as captain? Not really, as it would mean that David Beckham has failed to recover from his foot injury.'

THE LEGEND

Geoff Hurst England World Cup winner 1966

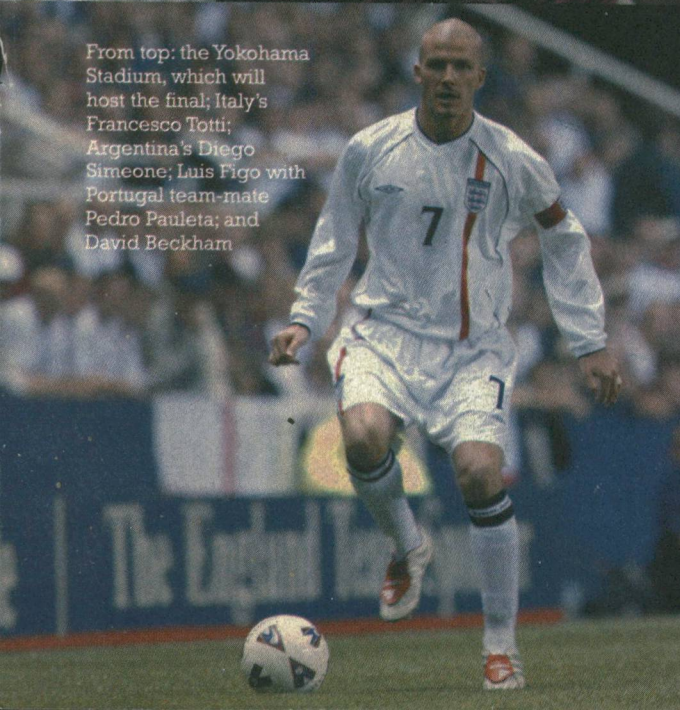

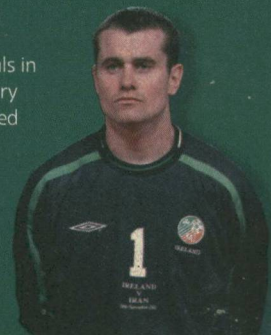

'Obviously, it's fantastic to be associated so strongly with the greatest moment in England's footballing history, but 36 years is a long time for us not to have won the World Cup. We came close in 1990, but I truly believe that the current group of players has the ability and the potential to go far in the tournament. You need a certain degree of luck as well as skill to win any competition, so why shouldn't that be England? If we get off to a good start against Sweden, then we have a chance.'

THE FIRST TIMER

Shay Given Republic of Ireland

- 'I can remember watching Ireland in the 1990 finals in Italy and celebrating like crazy when David O'Leary converted a penalty against Romania, which booked our place in the quarter-finals. But never in a million years did I think that one day I would be walking out in such a tournament to represent my country, but now it is here

From top: the Yokohama Stadium, which will host the final; Italy's Francesco Totti; Argentina's Diego Simeone; Luis Figo with Portugal team-mate Pedro Pauleta; and David Beckham apremature exit. From hero to villain in just four days, few would have expected Becks to lead his country this summer, yet he has done so with tremendous gusto and now has the chance to bury his ghosts in the first-round clash with Argentina on 7 June.

'Winning the first game against Sweden is what we will be concentrating on,' he has said. 'We can build from there and, as captain, nothing would give me greater pleasure than leading us to something special.' Beckham's influence will be needed in abundance if Sven's side are to progress.

The same can be said of Luis Figo, the masterful Portuguese midfielder, and Spain's top-scorer, Raul. Both are talismanic figures and Figo, in particular, has the hopes of a nation resting on his shoulders. It is his first appearance on the highest stage (Portugal failed to make the 1994 and 1998 finals) and with a relatively easy first-round group that includes USA and South Korea, there is every reason to believe he can deliver. 'We showed in Euro 2000 that we are the dark horses,' says the World Player of the Year. 'We have the players to beat anyone and if I can show the way, then that's what I will do.'

Confidence personified, but you would expect little else from a man who has replaced Zinedine Zidane as the world's best. The mercurial Frenchman shone like a beacon four years ago, but admits he will have his work cut out this time, regardless of the favourites tag.

'Both personally and as a team, it's going to be harder,' warns Real Madrid playmaker Zidane, whose team open the tournament against Senegal. 'But I have the desire to do it again. You don't get many chances, maybe just two if you are lucky, so I know this could be my last shot.' Zidane scored twice as France won the 1998 final against Brazil, which was billed as a battle between himself and Brazilian superstar Ronaldo. Unfortunately, the Inter Milan striker's knee injury scuppered his performance that day and he's been suffering ever since. However, after featuring in his first games for some two-and-a-half years against

Yugoslavia and Portugal recently, Ronaldo cannot be ruled out of coach Luis Felipe Scolari's World Cup plans.

Certainly, the challenge for any goal-scoring contender will be to match the achievements of Maradona, the greatest World Cup hero of them all; he single-handedly won Argentina the trophy in Mexico '86, and this summer Hernan Crespo is the man most likely to take on the baton for the South American favourites.

Following nine qualifying goals, the Lazio star is tipped to finish top scorer, and when the medals are handed out it's a safe bet that the side with the most potent goal-scorer will be on hand.

Italy boast such a player in Roma's Francesco Totti, who, like Portugal's Figo, has the pressure of a nation resting on him. 'I can handle it,' he said before the recent friendly with England. 'If people see me as a major player, then I see that as an honour rather than a problem.'

Whatever happens, the World Cup will become a tournament of star players rather than star teams.

Now let the fun begin. cg and I can't wait. Although it may have been unwise to celebrate too wildly at the final whistle of the Republic of Ireland's play-off game in Tehran, I couldn't help myself as the realisation suddenly set in that I would be going to the World Cup!

THE HEARTACHE

Stephen Carr
Republic of Ireland
'A tendinitis injury had kept me out of Tottenham's season but [Ireland manager] Mick McCarthy told me that as long as I made the final games of the season, I would be included in the Ireland squad. I had stepped up my training in March, but just as I was about to declare myself fit, I broke down again and it then dawned on me that I would not be going. Having played my part in the earlier qualifying games, it's heartbreaking to miss out.'

THE FUTURE

John Terry England
'It's been a real privilege to have captained the England under-21 side to the European Championships this summer, and although circumstances dictate that I won't be involved, I'll be cheering on both them and the full squad at the World Cup. It's my long-term ambition to captain England at a major finals and emulate what Tony Adams did for his country. I remember watching him leading the country at Euro '96 and he's a player I've really looked up to. Obviously, the finals have come around too quickly for me, but if I keep my head down and work hard at my game, I'm hoping to be around for the next tournament in four years' time.'

THE JOURNALIST

Gavin Hamilton
Editor, World Soccer
'For favourites, it's the usual suspects – France, Argentina,

Italy. It's going to be a strange World Cup on so many fronts: the first World Cup in Asia, the first to be co-hosted, and the conditions will be alien to a lot of players. It's starting two weeks earlier than previous tournaments, so some teams may skip on preparations and we could get some surprises – Cameroon could be one; they have the talent and the right mentality. The Japanese could do something, too, from a relatively easy first-round group. Players to watch? Totti, Zidane and Veron, and I hope Saviola gets some games for Argentina, as he's a real gem.'

THE WORLD CUP HOLDER

Thierry Henry
France

'It was a tremendous feeling for the French nation when we lifted the World Cup in 1998 and it is obviously the greatest achievement a player can attain. But on a purely personal level I was still young and didn't play as often as I would have liked. This tournament is going to be more important for me because I'd like to think that I can make a bigger contribution than last time. Yet it is not going to be an easy ride; as holders, we are there to be beaten and we won't have the same backing as we had four years ago.'

In like Flintoff

This month England face Sri Lanka and India in the annual tri-nation NatWest Series, and many will be hoping Andrew Flintoff can provide the impetus to carry the team to victory. Interview: Gareth Hargreaves

IT COULD BE ARGUED that, at 24 years old, Andrew Flintoff, the dynamic Lancashire and England all-rounder, holds the dreams of English cricket fans in the palms of his huge, club-like hands, such has been his development over the past 18 months. The burly 6ft 4in giant, nicknamed Fred after The Flintstones character, appears to have finally silenced criticism of his weight and form that plagued his early career and matured into a player of genuine stature.

A lack of quality all-rounders has long been a thorn in the side of English cricket. Indeed, for the best part of two decades those players drafted in to the national set-up as all-rounders have found the burden of expectation too great to bear. All in all, the search for the next Ian Botham has been an unrewarding one.

Flintoff has the talent to reverse that trend. He was explosive with the bat and a revelation with the ball over the course of the winter tours of India and New Zealand. Yet he is level-headed enough to accept that he is still on a learning curve. 'The winter tour went OK,' he says modestly, 'but each time I play I believe I am playing for my place. So I'm just pleased I'm in there and I'll do my best to fulfil any role that the captain wants me in.'

Self-effacing and candid off the pitch, he completely transforms himself on it. He is an explosive, sometimes cavalier, performer on the one-day stage and the NatWest Series opener against Sri Lanka at Trent Bridge could provide the ideal stage for a cameo from 'flashing Freddie' Flintoff.

Nevertheless, he is acutely aware of the threat posed by his friend and former club colleague Muttiah Muralitharan, despite his recent injury. The mesmerising spin of Murali is just one facet of a Sri Lanka squad which took England to the cleaners on the last occasion the two teams met, in winter 2001. 'In the one-day series in Sri Lanka they annihilated us 3-0. I don't think we played too well and they took full advantage, so there's no way we're underestimating the scale of the job,' he says, pointedly. 'I played for two or three years with Murali and he's got a real bag of tricks. Knowing him might help me in some ways, but the flip side of that is he'll have a good idea what he's going to do against me.'

The series also reacquaints England with India, reviving memories of Flintoff's powerhouse performance at the Wankhede Stadium last February, where his quick-fire 40 stabilised a faltering England innings and four crucial wickets helped square the series at three games apiece.

'We were struggling at one stage,' he recalls, with a fair degree of understatement. 'But I managed to get a few with the bat and chipped in with four wickets when India started taking risks. We did well to come back to square the series after being 3-1 down. They are a quality outfit: Sachin Tendulkar is probably the world's best batsman. Then there are the bowlers; the Indian attack is awesome: Anil Kumble, Javagal Srinath and Harbajhan Singh. Harbajhan is a world-class performer. He's aggressive - always in your face, and I'm sure he is going to fly when the series gets under way.'

This is a big season for Andrew Flintoff. Free of injury, focused and eager to get back in action, he is, nevertheless, playing down the importance of home advantage.

'The pitches are going to be a bit different to what they're used to, with more pace and bounce,' he explains. 'But these are two top quality sides, so I think this has the potential of being a very competitive series.'
